Resolution Number: RS02-195
January, 2002
ACADEMIC SENATE

Resolution

on a Moratorium on the Death Penalty

#RS02-195

The spirit of the university is embodied in open and rational discourse, humane forms of problem-solution,

Whereas

the humility inevitably generated by the quest for knowledge, and dedication to justice; and

The

Whereas

anger and fear ensuing from crimes very often incomprehensible to the average individual

are inimical and even contrary to the values and spirit of the academy; and

The

Whereas

knowledge resulting from new technologies makes it apparent that the death penalty has resulted from evidence persuasive in the moment

but later (and sometimes irremediably) shown to be inconclusive; and

It has been demonstrated repeatedly that the death penalty is unfairly applied to individuals on the basis of their racial and/or ethnic background, ignorance and poverty, major mental retardation, and/or severe emotional deprivation or damage, and substandard legal representation; and

The report of a highly-respected commission comprised of both supporters and opponents of the death penalty calls for massive reforms in the way states and the federal government now conceptualize and use the death penalty; and

For many of these reasons the states of Illinois and Maryland recently enacted a moratorium
Resolved
