

Bruce Manning: COSE

University Advancement activities are crucial for the current and future success of SF State. I'm interested in assisting University Advancement in new areas for growth, networking with alumni and donors, ways to support our students and faculty, enhancing university operations, and building new campus infrastructure.

Nicole Adelstein: COSE

My research program has greatly benefited from the sabbatical program, so I want to support it. I also have known faculty who have not been approved for their applied sabbatical. I want to learn how the selection process works and make it more transparent, or improve it if possible.

Eric Koehn: COSE

I have been an active Senate member serving on the APC committee for the 23/24 academic year. I would like to be reconsidered for election to this Senate position for the following term.

Marc Anderson: COSE

I'm generally interested academic integrity and interacted with the office of student conduct multiple times over the year related to student mis-conduct in the own courses I teach. I'm happy to contribute to these efforts.

I don't have previous experience in these committees, but find their goals interesting, and would be happy to contribute to those goals.

I am a research active faculty in the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry, with current and continuous funding over many years (NIH, Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, UCORP/private donations). This has given me a lot of opportunity to utilize the library for literature searches, and books, and various electronic search utilities provided by the library. I have also served as a Chemistry Department library coordinator for several years, where I worked closely with our previous COSE library representative (Caroline Harnley), and we provided joint training sessions for students on library resources and literature search utilities. Overall, I have an interest in providing equitable access to journals, books, and research tools to students, staff, and faculty, and having the library be beneficial to all members of the campus community.
